Knife to the throat

He was insane in his private life as well. In the glow of his torch, he would dig up his garden during the night, "because the lawn gets better ventilation during the full moon". The married man (three children) was caught because his colleague noticed: "The sex attacks

Drug exchange! I wanted to jump out of the window

He chucked all my clothes out. I wasn't allowed to paint my nails anymore or use any lipstick. I was supposed leave my hair down as it was. Roger Fritz gave me a total "makeover". His motto: "Leave the madame behind!"

It was a travelling circus her favourite game – "Risk". When Roger Fritz lost, he threw the board across the room.

The first time I got weed was from Anita Pallenberg, the "fairy of the Rolling Stones". Anita was as much a part of the Stones for many years as their guitars, drums and drugs.

There was a long walkway in Roger's house with the toilet at the end. That was the first time I had a joint. When I came out, the narrow corridor folded up before my eyes

There were more extreme things to come. I was shooting in Hamburg and rented a flat there with hardly any furnishings. When Roger came to visit me, he suddenly said, out of nowhere, "I want to have a child with you!"

A unique marriage proposal

I was in shock. Then he said: "And I want to marry you!" My mind was racing. There was no way to refuse. I ended up not taking the pills.

renowned editor and later director.

She said she was pregnant. I got up, stretched out my belly and called out: "I'm having a child too!" It was seriously mad.

I had to go to Triest for some directing work: "The Devil's Girls" with Blacky Fuchsberger. One morning, Blacky came to me and said: "Tell me, are you out of your mind, why didn't you say anything?!"

"What didn't I say?"
"That you're pregnant!"

One week after that denial came out, I started getting this weird craving for sardines. I was even eating them early in the morning.

That immediately made its way into the press. Roger was described as some kind of child seducer. He said

"Have the child in America!"

But we had so much else on our plate: the premiere of "Girls on Top" in Munich. We drove a tractor up to the cinema. It was very successful.

"Girls on Top" ended up winning me the Federal Film prize for Best German Young Actor.

Those wild years saw Germany's best young actor receive an award from the Federal Minister of the Interior in the State Opera – all while five months pregnant.
